228 Extreme Pressure Gear Oil

Description

Specially designed for the heavy-duty industrial gear systems, ZetaLube 228 is composed of high viscosity mineral oil and extreme-pressure additives that provide extra film strength and protection to gears exposed to high load/pressure and elevated temperatures. Available in four ISO VG grades, it meets a wide range of applications on various industrial gear sets depending on the viscosity grade required by the maintenance professionals.

228 Extreme Pressure Gear Oil

Features and Benefits

- Provides excellent film strength to resist friction and wear – protects gear sets from mal-functioning or misalignment due to metal-to-metal frictional wear and reduces unexpected downtime.
- Excellent oxidation stability and corrosion protection to prevent gear systems from unscheduled breakdown due to excessive carbon deposits and corrosive wears.
- Carefully balanced and calculated proportion of foam suppressant to prevent gear action from aerating the oil.
- Up to four different viscosity grades available for applications on a wide variety of gear sets.

Recommended Applications

- For lubrication of all types of industrial gears such as spur gears, helical gears, straight & spiral bevel gears, etc.
- For gear systems demanding the following requirements:
 - US steel
 - AGMA 250.04
 - DIN 51517
 - David Brown DB S1.53.101
 - Cincinnati Milacron
- Also suitable for gearbox containing bronze and copper alloy components.
